

SACRAMENTO POLITICS.

There has been a serious break in the Republican party at Sacramento. It appears that at the Republican primaries at Sacramento the Republicans resorted to stuffing the ballot box. The better class of Republicans repudiated this dirty work as they ought to have done, and have combined with the Democrats to elect a municipal ticket untainted by fraud. It rarely happens that there is provocation for a bolt, but an occasion of this kind certainly furnishes a sufficient excuse for a bolt and a combine with any established party whose ticket has been the result of a fair primary.

No decent Republican can afford to vote a ticket which was born in a stuffed ballot box, and no honest man would allow his name to go before the voters when his nomination sprang from bare-faced fraud as compassed by ballot-stuffing.

The APPEAL hopes the new ticket will win and teach the ballot-box stuffers that such dirty work will be no longer tolerated in California.

Judge Beatty, of this city, is one of the leaders of the revolt against ballot-stuffing. The move will result in good to the party and help it in the Fall campaign.

DEATH OF HENRY BERGH.

In the death of Henry Bergh, of New York, President of the Society for the Prevention of cruelty to animals, the horse has lost its best human friend.

For years this brave and tender hearted man has battled in defense of the noblest of animals against the cruelty, ignorance and stupidity of brutal drivers and taskmasters, that the rights of the horse might be recognized.

He caused bills to be passed and enforced the laws until his name became a terror to the wretches who heaped on the horse every indignity that their hard natures could devise. By these laws the weight of loads were regulated, and scores of obnoxious devices which made life a hell to the poor beasts of burden were done away with. He began his fight for the horse in the face of prejudice and ridicule, but the ability and sincerity of the man won him many supporters, and soon he had the best people of the country at his back. His labors were wonderfully effective, until he became as well known a figure on the streets of New York as was General Grant in Washington.

How it was Done.

It now transpires that Sullivan sprained his right wrist in his contest with Mitchell. In sending in a swinging right-hander his wrist was caught on the point of Mitchell's elbow, who of course put it there to catch the blow. It is a favorite trick and wonderfully effective. If you want to get a good idea of its effect, swing your right arm as hard as you can so that the tendons of the wrist strike the sharp corner of a table, and you will get a fair idea of it. A few rounds later on Sullivan gave Mitchell a full receipt by catching him the same way. This accounts for the length of the mill, as both men were fighting with one hand only.

Some of the newspapers of San Francisco, are wasting a good deal of ink in an ineffectual attempt to define what fine English is. Fine English is from the magazines which would never be read but for the pictures. Newspaper English ought to be the English which puts the most news in the smallest space, and deals with glittering generalities as little as possible. The masses want the news, and if the news is properly classified they do not stop to analyze the English.

The Sacramento Bee has a new power press which it calls the "Baby." In describing the printing process it says:

"A gentle touch of the lever starts the Baby, at her task of swallowing white paper and vomiting Bees." The Baby's stomach must be sadly out of order if it will not retain its food. Its ailment suggests "hives."
